he NAHB Economics and Housing Policy Group conducted the survey and tabulated the findings. The NAHB Business Management and Information Technology Committee provided oversight because it has jurisdiction over matters relating to improving the business management skills of NAHB builder members to enhance their competitiveness, profitability, and professionalism.

In accordance with NAHB strategic plan objectives, the committee makes policy recommendations on business management issues, develops educational programs, writes and publishes manuals, conducts business management research, and provides consulting assistance to other committees.
